

Youth and family center (CJG)

A walk-in point in the neighbourhood and the first point of contact for parents. Parents and young people can go here for support with their upbringing and with questions and concerns about everything that has to do with youth and family, health, growing up and upbringing. A CJG offers tailor-made advice, support and assistance. Youth teams are also active in the CJG. In a Youth Team, 6 or 7 family coaches work together at neighbourhood level in helping children, young people and parents. The CJG Family Coaches in the youth team offer help and support in growing up and raising children and young people. The Family Coach can decide together with the family that referral to specialist help is necessary. The Family Coaches work closely with schools, general practitioners and the police, among others. The Youth Teams also always work together with the Social Neighbourhood Care Teams. The Social Neighbourhood Care Teams are there for vulnerable adults in a neighbourhood.

Each CJG has at least the following features:

- o Youth Health Care (consultation centers and GGD)
- o The preventive WMO tasks (Social Support Act):
 - Provide information and advice
 - (Early) signaling of problems
 - Refer to the local and regional aid offer
 - Offer light pedagogical help
 - Coordinating care for young people and families
